From our President & CEO

Dear Friends,

At PYN, when we see young people, we see limitless possibilities. Our young people are our city’s untapped talent, the key driver to a vibrant and thriving economic future. The best way to develop that talent is by providing an opportunity to learn, grow and enhance the essential skills needed to enter and advance along a chosen career path. We define opportunities as education and employment experiences supporting intentional connections to quality career pathways. In our work, we are always seeking to enhance and grow the number of opportunities available to youth and young adults.

We are committed to addressing the many barriers that may impede our young people’s progress because we know that when our young people have equitable access to opportunity, they’re more prepared for the world of work. Ensuring that they are prepared is not only important for the growth and advancement of our young people but is also good business sense. When our young people are prepared for the workforce, current and potential businesses have the talent pool that they need to drive economic growth in the Greater Philadelphia area. This growth can ultimately help individuals and communities transcend poverty and decrease economic disparity.

As we celebrate PYN’s 20th Anniversary, we reflect on the progress we have made towards alleviating poverty and inequity through education and employment.

Since 1999, we have:

- Worked to raise Philadelphia’s high school graduation rate by more than 30 percent.
- Innovated more than 20 pilot programs to interrupt specific barriers that some of our young people face.
- United more than 200 service providers in a common strategy to deliver workforce and education programs and
- Raised more than $425 million from local and national funders to support youth education and employment opportunities in Philadelphia and beyond.

BUILT SUSTAINABLE SYSTEMS AND PARTNERSHIPS THAT HAVE YIELDED OVER 192,000 HIGH QUALITY OPPORTUNITIES FOR YOUNG PEOPLE.

We know that every young person deserves the chance to achieve their dreams. We look forward to many more years of service as we continue to innovate and create more opportunities. Together, we can make a lasting impact in young peoples’ lives and the future of our city. Please join me in building opportunity for our city and its future leaders.

In Service,

Chekemma J. Fulmore-Townsend
I was blessed to be able to work at the age of 14 as a junior camp counselor through WorkReady. I believed that working would lead to success during a time when many of the people I knew around me were facing serious challenges like incarceration or needing to leave high school before graduation. Being a camp counselor wasn’t what I expected as my first job, but being a young teen with a sense of responsibility and leadership was a great feeling. It was a learning experience that allowed me to motivate others and guide them in the right direction, which I found is one of my passions.

This experience was made possible by the Philadelphia Youth Network and its partners, which has been one of the organizations that has been life changing, not only for myself but for many of my friends and family. This past summer, I had the opportunity to work at PYN as a programs assistant intern thanks my connection as a participant of the Hub at PA CareerLink® West. As a recent college graduate, job hunting was difficult, but my youth navigator from the Hub told me about seasonal job opportunities at PYN. I couldn’t have asked for a better opportunity this summer because of the experience I had. Being a participant in the programs run by PYN was one thing, but working at PYN was next level. It was what I needed to get work experience in a professional environment. It helped shaped my work ethic and mindset, and I am thankful for the staff who are just like my family.

I had the opportunity to visit several locations where programs operate through WorkReady and it made me remember my time being a junior camp counselor. Seeing the excitement in the participants’ eyes and hearing how much they learned throughout the summer shows that programs like these are necessary and beneficial for the kids and teens in our community. Seeing these programs exist and knowing that these kids have opportunities to work was a better feeling to me than just coming to work to get paid. PYN has changed my life year after year, and I just thank the staff and supporters for the opportunity.

Convening stakeholders and informing policy

PYN believes in collectively addressing systemic barriers by serving as an intermediary, facilitating and joining conversations that create change on a larger level and scale.

PYN leads collective efforts related to education and employment, including:

WorkReady Philadelphia

a citywide effort to address the skills gap by convening partners to build a coordinated approach to preparing young people for future employment. WorkReady stakeholders seek to give young people ages 12-24 access to a meaningful paid work experience that promotes self-efficacy, connects youth to caring adults and offers the opportunity to build the transferable skills required to secure and sustain employment.

Project U-Turn

an alliance that unites partners to increase the graduation rate and prepare young people for future opportunities. The alliance is led by an executive committee, steering committee and action teams with cross-sector representation from the School District of Philadelphia, the Mayor’s Office of Education, the city’s Department of Human Services, Community College of Philadelphia, Public Citizens for Children and Youth, William Penn Foundation, practitioners and young people.

Generation Work

launched by Annie E. Casey in 2015, connects young adults with meaningful employment by changing the way public and private systems prepare them for jobs. Partners include District 1199c Training and Upgrading Fund, Job Opportunity Investment Network (JOIN) and YouthBuild Philadelphia Charter School.

Pathways to Justice Careers connects young people who are in-school, ages 16-21 with mentors and advisors who provide supports needed to graduate high school and enter a career in the criminal justice or emergency services fields. These services introduce youth to pro-social values of community safety and build positive community relationships, while building interest and awareness for the criminal justices and emergency services industries. By positively and intentionally building bridges between communities and law enforcement, Pathways to Justice Careers addresses systemic challenges in addition to impacting individuals. This pilot is made possible by a grant from the U.S. Department of Labor.

As a facilitator of processes to import and replicate new approaches, PYN:
- discovers best practices
- creates a plan for scalability, integrating technology and financial literacy
- improves infrastructure,
- strives for continuous learning and improvement

After the pilot, our E² Power Center staff integrated the Post-Secondary Bridging curriculum into everyday instruction, offering additional supports to students exploring college offerings.

- Michael Thompson, Director of Adult Education, Congreso de Latinos Unidos Inc.

Post-Secondary Bridging is designed to dramatically enhance post-secondary success for Philadelphia’s opportunity youth, by re-engaging those who are disconnected from high school to be successful in dual enrollment. Lessons learned from implementing the pilot were published in a program implementation guide, Foundational Elements for Post-Secondary Bridging, published in May 2018. The pilot will help inform Project U-Turn’s agenda for creating more post-secondary opportunities for disconnected young people throughout Philadelphia. This pilot is powered by the Social Innovation Fund in partnership with Jobs for the Future and the Aspen Institute for Community Solutions.
